

Susan's Brainwork

Tip #7

Greetings,

In life there are often events when an imposed time limit would be handy. For instance, when someone is telling a painfully boring story, it would completely change the experience knowing there is a timer and the boredom induced tears would end in 45 seconds. Or, allowing a specific amount of time to eat cookie dough, rather than just getting carried away until the entire bowl is empty; Not that this could ever really happen, of course, but I do ask that you not verify this with my children. Some realistic time limits are beneficial, especially when it comes to computer time.

Tip 7 Take advantage of the benefits of our Time Limit Manager software on your public access computers

Time Limit Manager 5.0 is our newest version. It keeps track and acts on time limits, so you don't have to. Simply install it, choose the desired time limit and feel free to do whatever you wish. TLM displays an unobtrusive countdown timer on each computer. At two intervals before the session is to end a prominent on-screen notice appears. When the time limit is reached the user is forcibly logged off to prepare for the next user. I could bore you to tears with the long list of benefits, but in the interest of your time you may click here for the complete description.

To learn more about Time Limit Manager, as well as, Fortres IOI and Clean Slate, please register for our free 30 minute Webinars.

Time Limit Manager 5: Powerful Usage Management for Computers

Register Now! Thursday, Sep 11, 1:00 PM - 1:30 PM EDT

Fortres IOI 7: Effective Desktop Protection for Windows

Register Now! Tuesday, Sep 9, 2:00 PM - 2:30 PM EDT

Clean Slate 7: Reliable Non-Restrictive Desktop Security

Register Now! Thursday, Sep 11, 2014 2:00 PM - 2:30 PM EDT

Until next time,

Susan

Susan Fortin

Susan@FortresGrand.com